

As of now all of our adult dogs are Embark tested. Testing may be a plus, but it does not clear a line or a puppy genetic anomalies and occurrences. None of my dogs have any health issues nor do my lines. If there is ever a occurrence where one of my dogs were to be they would be pulled from my program. We do chose our breeding pairings based on the Embark results.

We do not Embark the litters. We will provide a copy of each parents Embark health results to the buyer, at the buyers request. We give full disclosure on the one copy variant a particular dog has or if they are clear. There is a chance the puppy may or may not have received a copy of a variant from either parent that may or may not have a specific variant. However, it will be fully disclosed in this contract that said puppy has a parent with one copy of whatever variant that one and or both carry and that said puppy may receive a copy of it. We do not give any health guarantees, refunds, replacements, etc based on any results through Embark or other entities providing genetic testing should you decide to use those services as we have given full disclosure prior to a deposit being put down.

Embark is not perfect and has been known to make mistakes. We do not accept any responsibility for those mistakes. We only go by the results Embark has given us. And we fully disclose such to buyer prior to accepting a deposit. Once a deposit is made it is considered full acceptance of this contract and disclosure.

Should you choose to purchase/place a deposit on said puppy after disclosure of parents Embark health testing then you accept that said puppy may inherit any variant either parent may have tested positive for, if they tested positive for any. You also except that at any point in time during your puppies/dogs lifetime their parents and their Embark results can change as Embark adds new testing at random. These additions are something out of our control and we accept no responsibility to any newly added variants after deposit/purchase has been made. Our only responsibility is to disclose the current results at the time of deposit/purchase. And you accept you will not receive any refunds or replacements of any kind should puppy receive a copy of disclosed variant from Embark health results, or a variant is added by Embark after deposit/purchase has been made. (This also goes for any other dna health testing company and their results should you chose one other than embark.)

We do not do ofa screenings as it is optional. Should you chose to do this optional testing any results given are for your own personal use and we do not give any guarantees, warranties, refunds, or replacements based on this testing as anything could happen in a puppies major growth stages that can cause injuries mild to severe and we have no control on the raising of said puppy/dog after it leaves our care. This goes along with our main sales contract that we do not guarantee a puppy/dog to breed. "Seller makes no guarantees that the animal is of breeding and or show quality and assumes no responsibility financially or otherwise in the event the seller chooses to breed, or show said animal."

No DNA test can determine breed purity. A pedigree determines pure bred status. We accept no responsibility for Embark or any other companies breed purity results as it means absolutely nothing in regards to pure breed status. We stand behind our dogs pedigree backgrounds not invalid Embark/DNA results as it pertains to breed purity.
